

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements

Foreword

1 Introduction: Travelling and the Internet

- 1.1 70 Million Stories
- 1.2 Methodological Approach
- 1.3 Profile of the Chinese 'Netizen'

2 Travelling in the Mind of the Chinese Consumer

- 2.1 Yearning for Simplicity and Authenticity
- 2.2 Increasing Demand for In-depth Travel
- 2.3 Shopping and Luxury
- 2.4 Remaining Price Sensitivity
- 2.5 High Potential in Lower-Tier Cities
- 2.6 Honeymoon Boom
- 2.7 Travel Goes Mobile
- 2.8 Fringe Phenomena Spreading to the Mainstream

3 The Planning Phase

- 3.1 The Planning Process
- 3.2 The Information Landscape
- 3.3 Social Media Marketing Initiatives
- 3.4 Noteworthy Travel Blogs
- 3.5 The Visa Hurdle
- 3.6 The Time Factor

4 Europe in Understanding Chinese Outbound Tourism

- 4.1 Themes about Europe in the Social Media Sphere
 - 4.1.1 Authenticity, but only in Certain Doses
 - 4.1.2 The Importance of Safety and Stability
 - 4.1.3 The Role of Culture
 - 4.1.4 Language Barriers Lead to Observation Rather than Participation
 - 4.1.5 Delights
 - 4.1.6 Frustrations and Annoyances
- 4.2 The Mental Map of Europe
 - 4.2.1 General Awareness
 - 4.2.2 Travel Routes
 - 4.2.3 The Attractions of Europe

5 Chinese Travel Tribes in Europe

5.1 Tribal Marketing

5.2 Demography

5.3 The Five Major Tribes

5.3.1 Traditionalists

5.3.2 Wenyi Youth

5.3.3 Experience-centred Travellers

5.3.4 Hedonists

5.3.5 Connoisseurs

Conclusions

Annex – Information by Country

Bibliography